

To whom it may concern,
Once again greedy Big Corporate America cannot handle the "new kid on the block"... So, in an effort to protect his big corporate neighborhood, he will bully the new kid to get his way and avoid competition.
I have heard the absolutely ridiculous commercials in the local radio stations (which, by the way, Clear Channel owns 5 of the 8, I believe.) There is something wrong with that in itself!
I've heard the people complain about the "F" word. These people new the material was uncensored when they got there systems. (If they didn't, it's there fault for not doing the research!)

I've heard the stories of "picking the kids up, them getting in the car, and hearing the "F" word. When I heard that, I realized that this was a "witch-hunt". When will people become accountable for what their kids listen to and watch? Will we have to have filters on our radios now, like our cable tv? When will religion stop putting it's nose where it doesn't belong? This isn't the 14th century!

I urge the FCC to reconsider getting involved in a good free-market idea, that isn't public. I pay for my satellite service, and I'm responsible for what's played through the reciever. I can change the channel... Please protect free market, and stop NAB from trying to police what I pay to listen to.

Sincerely,

Eddie
